Why is Djibouti a port?

The port is a minimal deviation from the principal East-West trade route and provides a secure regional hub for transshipment and relay of goods. The port evolved out of Ethiopia's search for a maritime outlet to its railway line, and Djibouti's coastline provided both easy access and sheltered anchorage.

When was Djibouti built?

Port construction and expansion The Port of Djibouti was built in 1888 by Leonce Lagarde, the first French governor of Somaliland. After it became the capital of the colony, it was further expanded to allow landlocked Ethiopia to engage in Maritime trade. Hence, berths were constructed and it was integrated into the railway system by 1917.
