The paper provides a comprehensive analysis of Azerbaijan's energy cooperation with Europe. It covers the supply of fossil fuels (oil and gas) and green energy, examining both retrospective and prospective dimensions.

In July 2022, the European Union took a serious new step towards building a strategic partnership with Azerbaijan in the energy sector by signing a memorandum of understanding. This agreement was aimed at reducing its gas dependence on Russia: Baku is promising to double gas supplies to Europe over the next five years.

The European Commission has intervened, strongly denying that the agreement with Azerbaijan could become Putin's Trojan horse. As Tim McPhie, the Commission's spokesman for energy, assured, the so ...

Abstract. Azerbaijan is a country rich in oil and gas but with poor human rights and sky-high levels of corruption. Despite this record, the country signed a memorandum of understanding with the European Union to increase cooperation in energy production when the President of the European Commission, Ursula von der Leyen, visited Baku on July 18, 2022.

The document envisages that supplies of gas from Azerbaijan will double in the next five years and by 2027 Baku will supply Europe with at least 20 billion cubic metres (bcm) of gas per year. The memorandum is already being implemented, entirely successfully: European buyers of Azerbaijani gas already include Italy, Greece, Bulgaria and Romania.

Now Azerbaijan acted boldly, forcing an immediate surrender on the autonomous Republic of Artsakh. European Council President Charles Michel was due to mediate a solution between Armenia and ...
