Microgrid complexity is driven by a number of factors: the number of buildings or loads, the types and number of generation sources, critical and optional load management, the owner's objectives, and any regulatory constraints.

Though there are different "ways" of deploying microgrid assets, such as the Microgrid-as-a-Service (Borghese et al., 2020), the Distributed System Platform Provider (DSPP) in New York (Currie et al., 2020), deploying microgrids as a utility dispatchable asset is under consideration. An example of this is the Ameren Illinois microgrid, the first utility scale ...
